

Peace, Security, and International Responses in Central Africa : Conflict, Humanitarian Challenges, and Global Governance

Dr. Tatiana Carayannis

Dr. Tatiana Carayannis is Senior Advisor for Global Affairs and Technology at the Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton and Senior Visiting Researcher at the City College of New York. She previously directed international programs at the Social Science Research Council on violent conflict, the United Nations, conflict prevention, and China and the Global South, and has held visiting appointments at CUNY, LSE, and NYU. A leading scholar of peace and security in Central Africa/DR Congo, international organizations, and global governance, her current research examines war networks, new technologies, critical mineral supply chains, and international responses. Her major publications include The Third UN (2021), Understanding the Central African Republic (2015), and UN Voices (2005). She holds a Ph.D. in Political Science from the CUNY Graduate Center and an M.A. from NYU.
