Utsunomiya University

Overview

History

Starting from Tochigi Teacher College in the Meiji era and Utsunomiya Higher School of Agriculture and Forestry in the Taisho era, "Utsunomiya University" opened in 1949 as a newly established university. At that time, the university started with two schools: the School of Arts and Sciences and the School of Agriculture. In response to the changing times, four schools were established one after another. Utsunomiya University is the only national university in Tochigi Prefecture and now has six undergraduate schools and two graduate schools.
